NATIONAL: ‘STABLE UNCERTAINTY’ IN 2024 RACE

Voters focus on distinct issue areas for each candidate

West Long Branch, NJ – Vice President Kamala Harris’s entry into the presidential race may have been a game-changer at the time, but there has been little significant movement since then. While Harris continues to hold slightly more support than former President Donald Trump among all voters nationwide, there is more than enough room for the outcome to go either way as a result of very small shifts in turnout. The Monmouth (“Mon-muth”) University Poll finds nearly half of Trump voters are okay with the idea of destabilizing government in order to bring about change. Also, Trump voters are much less likely than Harris voters to express confidence that the election will be conducted fairly and accurately and are more concerned about election meddling.

Just under half of registered voters say they will either definitely (41%) or probably (7%) vote for Harris and, in a separate question, similar numbers will definitely (39%) or probably (6%) support Trump. The “definite” support numbers include voters who have already cast their ballots. About half say they will definitely not vote for Trump (50%), while about the same number definitely will not vote for Harris (48%). One change that has occurred since last month is more voters moving from the probable to definite categories. In September, total candidate support stood at 49% for Harris and 44% for Trump.

NATIONAL: SUPPORT FOR PRESIDENT 2024

Monmouth University Poll
National reg. voters: Oct. 17-21, 2024

“Presidential election polling this fall can best be characterized as stable uncertainty. Major events like an assassination attempt and a high-profile debate barely caused the needle to stutter. Shifts of a single point can be consequential to the outcome but are beyond the ability of most polls to capture with any precision. The bottom line is this race is a toss-up and has been since August,” said Patrick Murray, director of the independent Monmouth University Polling Institute.

POTENTIAL VOTER GROUPS

*Monmouth University Poll
National reg. voters, Oct. 17-21, 2024*

Taking potential third-party support into account knocks a point from the vote share for both nominees, to 47% for Harris and 44% for Trump, with 4% potentially going to other candidates if all registered voters turnout. Trump’s support increases slightly if this year’s electorate is identical to turnout from four years ago – 46% for Trump, 47% for Harris and 3% for other candidates. The picture of the race is a little better for Harris when motivation is used as a potential turnout metric. Voters who describe themselves as extremely motivated to cast a ballot this year represent three-quarters (74%) of all registered voters. Among this group, Harris has 51% support and Trump is backed by 46%, with the third-party vote share dropping to 2%. The proportion of this motivated electorate who are undecided – meaning they do not lean toward any candidate – is only 1%.

Voters remain somewhat more confident in Harris (55%) than Trump (48%) when it comes to possessing the mental and physical stamina necessary to carry out the job, but the gap is not all that large. Just under half are confident that either Harris (46%) or Trump (47%) can bring about the kind of change our country needs, although voters are more likely to be very confident about Trump (37%) than Harris (28%) on this score. A majority of voters (60%) say it is more important to have a stable system of government even if that means not much changes in the country. This compares with 34% who say it is more important to have significant change even if that means our system of government becomes less stable. Harris supporters prefer stability (74%) over change (23%), while Trump backers are split (44% stability and 45% change).

Trump has suggested that he could suspend some laws and constitutional provisions to go after political enemies if he is elected. Voters are divided on whether this is something he will seriously do (48%) or if it is more of an exaggeration (49%). Six in 10 voters (59%) would be bothered a lot if Trump actually did this. Most Trump supporters (77%) view these statements as exaggerations, but only 28% would be bothered a lot if he actually carried them out. Among Harris voters, 78% take these statements seriously and 90% would be bothered a lot if he was elected and followed through on them.

The two candidates run evenly when it comes to being seen as understanding the “day-to-day concerns of people like you” – 48% say this describes Harris either a great deal or some and 48% say the same about Trump. The Democrat had a slight edge on this metric in prior Monmouth polls (49% for Harris to 45% for Trump in September).

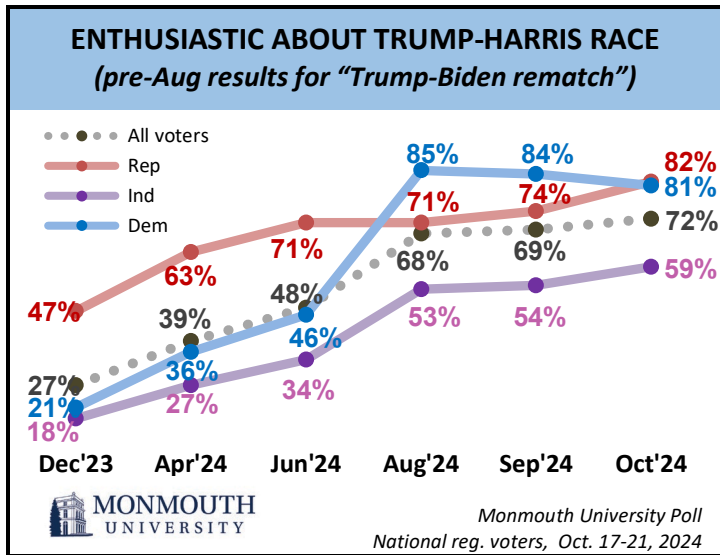

Turning to policy areas, the Republican has a small advantage on being trusted to handle economic growth and job creation (54% for Trump and 49% for Harris) as well as inflation (52% for Trump and 46% for Harris). The gap is even wider when focusing on voters who have a great deal of trust in either candidate on these two issues – about 4 in 10 for Trump to about 1 in 4 for Harris.

Trump (51%) holds an advantage over Harris (45%) on being trusted to handle immigration, especially when it comes to having a great deal of trust on this issue (41% for Trump to 24% for Harris). However, Trump’s overall trust level on immigration has declined slightly from last month (56% in September) while trust in Harris has remained stable (45% in September).

The Democrat’s one clear issue advantage is on abortion – 57% trust Harris while 41% trust Trump. There is an even wider margin among those who trust the candidates a great deal (43% Harris to 27% Trump).

The gender gap in the presidential race – 52% of women currently support Harris (42% back Trump) and 50% of men currently support Trump (44% back Harris) – continues to be smaller than the difference in support levels by race and education. Among white voters without a college degree, Trump has a 60% vote share and Harris has 36% support. Harris holds more support than Trump among white college graduates (56% to 38%) as well as voters who are Black, Hispanic, Asian, or of another racial identity (60% to 28%).

The jump in voter enthusiasm that occurred when Harris replaced President Joe Biden as the Democratic candidate remains, but with a slight partisan flip. Overall, 72% of voters are either very or somewhat enthusiastic about the Harris-Trump race, which is similar to levels in September (69%). Enthusiasm has increased among Republicans since last month (from 74% to 82%), while it has dipped slightly among Democrats (from 84% to 81%).

In other poll findings, 66% of voters are at least somewhat confident that the 2024 election will be conducted fairly and accurately. This includes 87% of Harris voters, but only 44% of Trump supporters. In the prior presidential election, a similar number of voters was confident in the fair and accurate conduct of that year's election (60% in late September 2020), but there was a much smaller gap between Biden voters (69%) and Trump voters (49%). Currently, nearly three-quarters (73%) of voters are at least somewhat concerned about the possibility that election meddling could undermine the integrity of the 2024 results. Trump voters (85%) are much more likely than Harris voters (64%) to be concerned about this. In 2020, there was little difference in the levels of concern about election meddling between Trump (83%) and Biden (80%) voters.

"We are seeing news reports about election meddling efforts coming from both inside and outside of our country. I don't know why, but some Democrats have taken their eye off this ball," said Murray.

On the generic congressional ballot, 47% of voters currently support the Democratic congressional candidate in their U.S. House district, while 45% back the Republican. This result is not statistically different from prior Monmouth polls this year. Among extremely motivated voters, Democrats currently have a negligible 50% to 47% edge over Republicans for the House, while among the 2020 electorate, voter support is evenly divided between Democrats (47%) and Republicans (47%).

The Monmouth University Poll was conducted by telephone and online from October 17 to 21, 2024 with 802 registered voters in the United States. The question results in this release have a margin of error +/- 4.1 percentage points. The poll was conducted by the Monmouth University Polling Institute in West Long Branch, NJ.

METHODOLOGY

The Monmouth University Poll was sponsored and conducted by the Monmouth University Polling Institute from October 17 to 21, 2024 with a probability-based national random sample of 802 voters. Monmouth is responsible for all aspects of the survey design, data weighting and analysis. Interviews were conducted in English, and included 133 live landline telephone interviews, 220 live cell phone interviews, and 449 online surveys via a cell phone text invitation. Interviewing services were provided by Braun Research using telephone numbers randomly selected from a list of active registered voters obtained from Aristotle. The full sample is weighted for region, age, gender, race and listed partisanship based on the voter list and education based on US Census information (2022 CPS and 2021 ACS one-year surveys), with adjustments made for self-reported 2020 presidential vote. For results based on this sample, one can say with 95% confidence that the error attributable to sampling has a maximum margin of plus or minus 4.1 percentage points adjusted for sample design effects (1.41). Sampling error can be larger for sub-groups (see table below). In addition to sampling error, one should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.

Demographics (weighted)

Party (registration/inferred from vote history): 34% Republican, 35% Democrat, 31% other, none

Party (self-reported): 28% Republican, 42% Independent, 30% Democrat

Sex: 47% men, 52% women, 2% other

Age: 25% 18-34, 23% 35-49, 26% 50-64, 26% 65+

Race: 69% White, 12% Black, 12% Hispanic, 7% Asian/other

Education: 31% high school or less, 31% some college, 24% 4 year degree, 14% graduate degree
